OUR CHILDHOOD,

Tis and, yet sweet, to listen
To the soft wind's gentle await,
And think we hear the music
Our childhood knew so well;
To gaze out on the evan,
And the boundless fields of air,
And feel again our boy hood's wish
To roam like angels there.

That cling around the past—
And from the tomb of feeling
Old thoughts come throughing Pat;
The forms we loved so dearly
In the happy days now gone,
Tho bimarital and lovely;
So fair to look upon.

The bright and gentle maidens
Who seemed so formed for tillss.
Too glorious and too heavenly
For such a world as this;
Whese dark, soft eyes seemed swimming
in a sen of liquid light.
And whose locks of gold were streaming
O'er brows so sunny bright:

whose smiles were like the sustaine in the Spring time of the year— Like the changeful gleams of April, They follow every tear: They have passed—like hopes—away, And their loveliness has fied; Oh, many a heart is mourning That they are with the dead.

Like the brightest buds of sunmer. They have fallon with the stem; Yet, oh it is a lovely death To fade from earth like them!

And yet the thought is addening
To mase on such as they.
And feel that all the benefital
Are passing fast away!
That the fair ones whom we love
Grow to each loving breast
Like the tendrils of the chinging vine,
Then perish where they rest.

And we can but think of these, In the soft and gentle Spring. When the trees are waving o'er us, And the flowers are blessoning; And we know that Winter's coming With his cold and storagysky, And the glorious beauty round us, Is building but to die?

Where two or more well filled ears are found on the same stock, they should be taken; for the tendency of "like to beget like," holds good in the vegetable, as in the animal. The main point in the care needed, after the selection is made, is to thoroughly cure both kernel and cob. Don't let it freeeze until it is perfectly dry. The most suitable way, perhaps, is to icave a few husks on each ear; braid them into a string, and hang up in a dry room. It will answer to spread it on the floor of a dry
